ABSTRACT

An annotated bibliography to the reference sources for Jewish Studies in the McLennan Library of McGill University (Canada) is presented. Any titles in Hebrew characters are listed by their transliterated equivalents. There is also a list of relevant Library of Congress Subject Headings. General reference sources listed are: encyclopedias, handbooks, language dictionaries, specialized dictionaries, directories, yearbooks, biographical dictionaries, and periodical indexes. Bibliographic sources listed are: bibliographic guides, library catalogues, general bibliography, and special subject bibliographies. Subjects included and further subdivided are: history, Bible, Talmud, Rabbinic literature, language and linguistics, and sociology. (BZ)

A Guide to Reference Sources

In the past two decades Jewish Studies programs have developed beyond the confines of Jewish academic institutions and are now widely accepted in North American universities as an appropriate part of the university curriculum. During this period there has been a steady growth in the literature of Judaica, Hebraica and related fields. There has been a similar growth in the number of reference sources and bibliographies published to provide guidance and access to this literature.

The emphasis of this guide is on sources which deal uniquely with Jewish Studies materials. Special attention has been given to sources in the areas of study emphasized in the Jewish Studies program at McGill. Although several inter-disciplinary sources have been included, sources devoted primarily to other disciplines but useful for research in Jewish Studies are cited in other guides prepared by the McLennan Library Reference Department. They are available for consultation at the reference desk or for purchase at the Copy Service. Guides prepared for the following subjects may be useful:

Archaeology
Book Reviews
Comparative & General Literature
Folklore
History (general & individual countries)
Linguistics
Philosophy
Psychology
Sociology
Theses and Dissertations
Translations
Women's Studies

The purpose of this guide is to introduce students to selected reference sources in the humanities and social sciences available at McGill which facilitate the study of Jewish culture in its broadest sense. Note that the guide is selective and must be supplemented by careful use of the library system's subject catalogues. A list of some relevant Library of Congress subject headings used in our subject catalogues will be found at the end of this introduction. The Cutter Subject Catalogue must be consulted for material received before 1967. The subject heading terminology used in that catalogue is different. Headings tend to be more general and often appear as subdivisions of the heading JEWS, eg. JEWS-ZIONIST MOVEMENT; JEWS-ANTISEMITISM.

Certain categories of material have been excluded, notably bibliographies devoted to works by and about individuals including writers, historians, philosophers etc. These bibliographies may be easily identified and located by checking the library's subject catalogues under the name of the individual concerned.

More than half of this guide is devoted to bibliographies in special subject areas. You are reminded that these subjects are also covered by some of the comprehensive sources listed in the general bibliographies section (II. A., B. and C.) as well as in the periodical indexes section. (I.G.)

The form of entry of items listed in this guide conforms to that used in the McGill catalogues. Titles in Hebrew characters are listed by their transliterated equivalents according to the Library of Congress transliteration scheme. Not all locations for items listed have been given here; additional locations may be found by checking the catalogues.

Collections in the McGill Library System:

Several collections of the Department of Rare Books and Special Collections will be of particular interest: the Rabbi Lewin Collection consists of 167 volumes of Hebraica primarily of the nineteenth century; the Joe Fishstein Yiddish Poetry Collection consists of 2,275 volumes of twentieth century Yiddish poetry published throughout the world including several rare Soviet imprints; the Lande Collection of Canadiana includes approximately 40 items of Jewish interest. The collections in the Religious Studies Library and the Islamics Institute Library will also be of special interest.

Collections outside McGill

Montreal. The collections of the Jewish Public Library (located at 5151 chemin de la Côte Ste. Catherine), the archives of the Montreal Holocaust Memorial Centre at the same address and the archives of the Canadian Jewish Congress (1590 Docteur Penfield) will be of special interest.

Ottawa. The noted Jacob M. Lowy Collection of rare Hebraica and Judaica is available for consultation at the National Library of Canada. An illustrated exhibition catalogue of selected material from this collection entitled Incunabula, Hebraica, Judaica; Five Centuries of Hebraica and Judaica; Rare Bibles and Hebrew Incunables from the Jacob M. Lowy Collection (Z7070.N37) is available for consultation in McLennan Reference Department.

Other. Material not available at McGill can usually be borrowed from other Canadian libraries as well as from numerous Jewish Studies collections in American libraries via our interlibrary loan service. For example, the American Jewish Periodicals Centre at the Hebrew Union College Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati has an extensive microfilm collection of current and retrospective Jewish newspapers and periodicals published in the U.S., Canada and Latin America in all languages. Items in this collection are available for loan or sale. In addition, McGill is a member of the Center for Research Libraries in Chicago which has in its collections many Israeli newspapers, government documents and materials relating to the International Military Tribunal and Nuremberg Military Tribunals.

If you have difficulty using this guide or the reference sources listed in it please ask a reference librarian for assistance.

This guide was compiled by Elaine Yarosky, Reference Department, McLennan Library. Thanks to Ilana Fleishman for assistance.

II. D. 3. Literature

This section deals mainly with the bibliography of Jewish belles-lettres in Hebrew, Yiddish and English. Jewish creative writing in other languages is covered by general and literary bibliographies of various countries, languages and genres. Please consult a reference librarian for appropriate bibliographies of French, German, Spanish, English, American, and other literatures. The following literary history is a very important source for the study of Jewish literature in all languages.

Zinberg, Israel. A History of Jewish Literature. Translation of Di Geshikhte fun Literatur Bay Yidn ed. by Bernard Aratin. Cleveland, Case Western Reserve University Press, 1972-79. 12 vols. (PJ5008.Z5313 McL., UL).

This comprehensive work covers Jewish belles-lettres, commentaries on the Bible and Talmud, folklore, theology, philosophy, ethics, philology, chronicles, travels and more from the tenth to the twentieth centuries. A selective bibliography of primary and significant secondary material is given at the end of each volume.

Lib. has: v.1, 1921/25-

This annual bibliography is extremely useful for identifying critical studies on Jewish authors and literature in all languages. YIDDISH LITERATURE, now listed under country of origin, was covered with Eastern European literature until 1955 and with German literature from 1956-1980. HEBREW LITERATURE is listed under country of origin eg. Spain, Israel, etc. ISRAELI LITERATURE, now listed in section (volume) II with West Asian Literatures, was covered from 1959 to 1980 in the Oriental Literature section. Studies on linguistics are found in section (volume) 3. General topics (eg. psycholinguistics, semantics etc.) precede studies on particular language groups. The Hebrew language is grouped with north-west Semitic languages while Yiddish is grouped with Germanic languages. Records from 1970 onward are available for online computerized searching. For further information inquire at the McLennan Reference Department. For details on the use and various formats of this bibliography consult the Guide to the Use of the MLA International Bibliography which is posted on the Index Stands where the volumes are shelved.
